A Worldly Country New Poems

More Like Jesus Let us be more like Jesus In everything we do; Let's live a life of service, A life that's fresh and new. Let's relinquish worldly things, And not be slaves to fashion; Let's fill our hearts with love, Forgiveness and compassion. Yes, let's be more like Jesus, Being always in God's will, For if Jesus' light shines through us, Our earthly purpose we'll fulfill.

The death poem is a genre of poetry that developed in the literary traditions of East Asian cultures—most prominently in Japan as well as certain periods of Chinese history and Joseon Korea. They tend to offer a reflection on death—both in general and concerning the imminent death of the author—that is often coupled with a meaningful observation on life.

John Donne's standing as a great English poet, and one of the greatest writers of English prose, is now assured. However, it has been confirmed only in the early 20th century. The history of Donne's reputation is the most remarkable of any major writer in English; no other body of great poetry has fallen so far from favor for so long and been generally condemned as inept and crude.

Pastoral literature Pastoral literature in general. Pastoral is a mode of literature in which the author employs various techniques to place the complex life into a simple one. Paul Alpers distinguishes pastoral as a mode rather than a genre, and he bases this distinction on the recurring attitude of power; that is to say that pastoral literature holds a humble perspective toward nature.
