Foundations of geometry is the study of geometries as axiomatic systems. There are several sets of axioms which give rise to Euclidean geometry or to non-Euclidean geometries. These are fundamental to the study and of historical importance, but there are a great many modern geometries that are not Euclidean which can be studied from this viewpoint.

It would be ideal if people struggling with addiction or mental illness could admit that there is an issue and then ask for the help they'll need in order to get better. Unfortunately, more than 80 percent of people who have an addiction don't get the help they need to recover. These people may believe that they have their addictions under control, or they may believe that their addictions ...

Preface to the Home Education Series. The educational outlook is rather misty and depressing both at home and abroad. That science should be a staple of education, that the teaching of Latin, of modern languages, of mathematics, must be reformed, that nature and handicrafts should be pressed into service for the training of the eye and hand, that boys and girls must learn to write English and ...

MFT proposes that the human mind is organized in advance of experience so that it is prepared to learn values, norms, and behaviors related to a diverse set of recurrent adaptive social problems (specified below in Table 2.1). We think of this innate organization as being implemented by sets of related modules which work together to guide and constrain responses to each particular problem.
