A part of progress is that people have definitely gotten more knowledgeable about gender and how we raise our children should be reflective of that. We often have ideas about how to raise strong, independent girls but raising boys in a more progressive way is also important to make sure that they become fine men who believe in equality. Here are things you need to tell young boys.

I bet you don't remember, Jack, what we talked about back in 2007 about happiness: you can never be happy all the time because the mind measures happiness relative to how things were before, especially not so long before. If things are getting better you feel happy. If things stay the same for a while, no matter how good they are, you eventually start to feel less happy.
